

Addie Rolnick joined the firm Sonosky, Chambers, Sachse, Endreson & Perry in 2004 following her graduation from UCLA School of Law, with Concentrations in Critical Race Studies and Public Interest Law and Policy. Ms. Rolnick works in all phases of the firm's practice, with an emphasis on legislative matters. She received her Bachelor of Arts, with Honors in Sociology, from Oberlin College in 1999. She is currently completing her Master of Arts in American Indian Studies from UCLA, with a focus on tribal juvenile justice and child welfare system development. Prior to joining the firm, Ms. Rolnick drafted tribal codes and assisted in tribal court development for the Native Village of Barrow in Alaska. She also worked as a summer clerk for the Native American Rights Fund in Anchorage and served as a judicial clerk for the Hopi Appellate Court.

In 2005, Ms. Rolnick served as an adjunct professor at American University and co-taught "Formation of Federal Indian Policy", and is a member of the California Bar, 2005; and District of Columbia Bar, 2006.
